

Training for GPs

Your training does not stop when you leave university.

Throughout your career as a GP, you are expected to participate in Continuous Professional Development (CPD). This can be done in many different ways including attending conferences, reading papers or receiving additional training.

There are numerous training opportunities available for GPs to expand their knowledge in specialised areas as they take on new roles. These can include an MSc or enhanced communication or management skills.

Knowing where to look for information about what training and funding is available can be time consuming and frustrating. The GP Support Hub can help with this.

Speak to us today about what you would like to achieve. We can help you look for training and potentially find some funding.
